Freddie Barber
A Brief Biographical Sketch

Freddie Barber is a native Atlantan who graduated from L. J. Price High School, joined the Army and served in Vietnam from 1969-1971.

For 25 years, he worked as a clerk in the receiving department at the Sears warehouse at Jefferson Street. In 1989, a year before leaving Sears, he began his career in vending, selling air fresheners at a car wash.

He began sports vending in 1991 by selling licensed Atlanta Braves paraphernalia outside Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. He also sold Atlanta Falcons paraphernalia, mostly t-shirts and caps, in 1998. When the Falcons moved to the Dome, he began vending on private property.

Mr. Barber feels fortunate to be able to survive in the vending business, which has become more difficult because many manufacturers of licensed athletic gear are refusing to sell to vendors without storefronts. Because he has been a vendor for more than 15 years, Mr. Barber has been able to amass a stockpile of paraphernalia and to maintain contacts with merchandisers who will provide him with gear.

Mr. Barber is the father of four children – two sons and two daughters – and is a member of the usher board at Beulah Baptist Church.
